West Virginia swept the games last year as the girls won 54-53 and the boys earned a 104-83 victory. The West Virginia lineups have the talent to repeat as all-star classic champions, but the Maryland teams will look to keep the trophies in state.

This year, the West Virginia girls lineup boasts 11 players from eight different high schools, three of the area's top-10 scorers and will be coached by Josh Blowe and Bryan Wilson of Keyser. Hannah Carl of Hampshire will lead the West Virginia girls as she is coming off a season in which she led the area with an 18.4

point per-game average. She will be joined by her Hampshire teammate Sierrah Blomquist.

Elizabeth Yaider, Meghan Anderson and Markisha Coleman from Keyser represent the most players from one school on the West Virginia roster. Saydi Whiteman and Stephanie Bills have joined the girls all-star team from Frankfort as Whiteman capped the season ranked sixth in the area in scoring (13.0).

Caitlin Maxwell (Tucker County), Morgan Keplinger (Pendleton County), Jenna Hiser (Petersburg) and Shannon Combs (Moorefield) round out the W.Va. girls roster.

JoJo Carr (Calvary) will lead a talented girls lineup for Western Maryland. Carr is the squad's leading scorer after averaging 13.3 points and finishing third in the area. Lindsie Linaburg (Allegany) and Mariah James (Fort Hill) both averaged 10.4 points and will provide a pair of excellent scoring options on the offensive end. Ashley O'Neil and Alyssia Twigg join James from the Times-News Area champion Fort Hill girls roster.
